

Monica Gorini

Monica Gorini lives and works between Milan and Lake Orta. After studying at the Brera Academy of Fine Arts, she divided her time between teaching and artistic research. The work of years with blind people has opened the way for an art linked to sensoriality. Her sculptures are to be perceived with all senses but tactile research and attention to the matter are the constants that are also found in the paintings. The photographs and her installations concern social and environmental issues related to respect for human rights and the development of an ecological conscience.

She has won numerous international awards including, the "11th Julia Margaret Cameron Award", an international photography contest dedicated exclusively to women photographers, with a portfolio dedicated to gender identity research.

She was invited to collaborate with Art Beyond Sight, exhibiting, in 2007 and 2009, multi-sensory sculptures and installations at the Metropolitan Museum in New York.

New York, Paris, London, Berlin, Barcelona, Turin, Venice, Milan, Rome are some of the cities in which he exhibited his works.
